

Interdisciplinary Dialogue Seed Funding

We invite participants of the Interdisciplinary Dialogue to join together in submitting 1-2 page seed grant proposals that delve more deeply into the following interdisciplinary theme:

Participatory Research: growing the agency of communities and co-creating new knowledge

Participatory research can be a vehicle to collaborate and coordinate with stakeholders in generating empowering information for both scholars and broader communities. Community expertise could be of great value to researchers, and new knowledge can help communities overcome a lack of resources for advocacy, skills for implementation, or access to decision-making settings. Large and small, marginalized and central, communities can benefit from the academic engine -- and the academy can benefit from the perspectives of a partner community.

Join us for an evening of exploratory dialogue and reflection as we learn from each other, and from participatory research practitioners. Discuss which methods have worked for you -- from citizen science to community-based participatory action research -- and learn research approaches for maximum inclusivity and impact.

Applications Close December 3, 2019

Up to $5,000 will be available for one to two proposals that best demonstrate:

- Relevance to the interdisciplinary issue raised during the event
- Novelty of uncommon collaboration among partners
- Unique ability to contribute to the field
- Likelihood for near-term impact

Applications are open until December 3, 2019: a short application (1-2 pages, including figures, timeline and budget). Submit proposal(s) by using the application link below.
